Policy Statement.

Students seeking admissions to the Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine (TCOM) at the University of North Texas Health Science Center must participate in a competitive selection process. The purpose of this policy is to delineate the procedures and guidelines utilized by the medical school admissions committee to determine acceptance to the program.

The Admissions Committee looks for students who demonstrate the greatest promise of becoming skilled osteopathic physicians. Applicants will be evaluated on their personal integrity, compassion, maturity, interpersonal and communication skills, creativity, motivation for and interest in a medical career, ability to work cooperatively and dedication to service of others.

These qualities and attributes will be evaluated by several means, including letters of evaluation, the scope and nature of extracurricular activities, the breadth of the undergraduate education and personal interviews. All aspects of the entire academic record, including trends in scholastic performance, will be examined. Personal experiences, job history (if applicable) and motivation to become and osteopathic physician will also be considered. As a state-supported medical school, TCOM is required to enroll 90 percent Texas residents for each entering class. Up to 10 percent of each entering class may be filled with non-residents. An alien living in the United States under a visa permitting permanent residence or who has filed with the proper federal immigration authorities a declaration of intention to become a citizen has the same privilege of qualifying for Texas residency as do citizens of the United States.

Application of Policy.

All candidates seeking admission to the medical school (TCOM).
